COURT OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE SUMMARY OF OPINIONS

- Slip Op. 17-119
The CIT remanded for further explanation Commerce’s 2016 scope determination that mass filter radiators were subject to AD and CVD duties under the aluminum extrusions orders. The court stated that Commerce did not “adequately discuss the record evidence” and specifically how these mass filter radiators differed from exempted heat sinks.
- Slip Op. 17-122
The CIT sustained Commerce’s remand results in the CVD investigation on certain crystalline silicon photovoltaic products from China. The case hinged on Commerce’s examination of certain programs provided by the Government of China and upon remand Commerce supported its determination to find these programs countervailable under the statute and regulations.
- Slip Op. 17-128
The CIT found that locking pliers imported by Irwin Industrial Tool are classifiable as pliers, not vises or clamps. The CIT already determine in April that CBP’s liquidation of the imported locking pliers as wrenches was premature, the CIT found that the locking pliers are not classifiable as vises either, because they pivot on a central fulcrum and close by gripping the handles, rather than by turning a screw or lever.
- Slip Op. 17-129
The CIT found that door hardware with knobs that incorporate locks are classifiable as locks in the HTSUS. The importer of the hardware, Home Depot, had argued it was classifiable as mountings and fittings for doors, and dutiable at a lower rate though the hardware includes doorknobs that would be classified as mountings and fittings if imported alone,

OTHER TRADE MATTERS

- Argentina's foreign ministry is claiming that the U.S.'s recent decision instituting countervailing duties on imports of biodiesel from Argentina is contrary to WTO rules. Argentina is threatening the challenge the decision and take the U.S. to the WTO once the case is final. (Inside US Trade September 1, 2017)
- On September 7, 2017, the American Line Pipe Producers Association asked the administration to act quickly on the pending Section 232 investigation. The letter focusses on the increase in imports from China and the global steel overcapacity. See Letter.
- On September 14, 2017 -- A Chinese aluminum company and its owner were alleged to have evaded more than $1.5 billion in antidumping and countervailing duties by importing aluminum extrusions masked as pallets, according to allegations in a complaint filed by the government on Sept. 14 in Central California U.S. District Court. The complaint seeks the forfeiture of 549 containers of extruded aluminum pallets imported by Perfectus Aluminum and detained by CBP at the Port of Los Angeles-Long Beach in 2016.
- On September 22, 2017, the ITC determined that increased imports of crystalline silicon photovoltaic cells (whether or not partially or fully assembled into other products) are being imported into the United States in such increased quantities as to be a substantial cause of serious injury to the domestic industry producing an article like or directly in competition with the imported article.
